

We are the readers not
 Who leadership should look like and in the future

What is leadership?
 Leadership is the process of influencing others to follow you or your ideas. It is the ability to inspire, motivate, and guide a group of people towards a common goal. Leadership is not a title or a position; it is a set of behaviors and actions that can be practiced by anyone.

The path you travel, Richard, toward that end, and whether you follow your dreams from a high of hope that you will be able to follow, this also already you will follow you will take to reach someone

This is great. Very bold, interesting, attention grabbing opening. It's poetic in it's breakdown.

Great segway into your next part, could you connect back to this at the end of your essay?

This is all really interesting and it's very personal which is brilliant. But why are you telling us? Is this building to your conclusion? How did it feel to go on that path and why did you do it?

Is there a way of smoothly connecting these two sections?

Love how this builds in itself as an really interesting metaphor. It's super clear what it's saying but how does it relate to what you're trying to say as a whole?

Love how you expand on this metaphor

I love what you're saying here. Is there a way to add yourself into this? How did you discover this? How did you go on this journey?

General notes

Before we get into feedback just know that you are brilliant, this is brilliant and whenever anyone gives you feedback take all of it with a pinch of salt. It's all subjective, it's all just questions and suggestions to help YOU get to where YOU want this to be. You're the one who's going to write it and redraft it. Not me, this is all to help you, so if anything isn't helpful, throw it away. That all being said...

This is really great. It's really thorough, really well considered. You pull apart the issue in a very detailed way and I think it's very unique.

In terms of improving I feel like it would be good for you to almost plot what your whole essay is trying to say. Can you define in one sentence your response to the question "How leadership should look now and in the future?". Once you have this it might centre the essay a little more around it.

Have a little more about the path you want the article to take. What do you want the reader to go away thinking? How can you conclude your article to sum that up? And then working backwards how do you build up to that point? How does every part of your article build to argue this? Why is each part there? What does it add to the whole argument and if it doesn't work for this argument then is it needed?

I think at the moment each part of your article is brilliant. Each individual part of the article is beautiful, you make fantastic use of metaphor to explore issues but then how do you connect each of these parts to make an impactful ending and an unshakable final point?

Where can you add Sour Lemons and yourself into this? I feel like once you have a little more focus on clarity on these huge interesting ideas that you're dissecting and focus it through the lens of one question that is the next step. Could you then show how you came to these realisations? How YOU realised these things? How it felt to YOU? And how did Sour Lemons help you to come to realise these things? How do you make it all more Lizzie.

I want to stress that your voice and the way you explore ideas through metaphor is so strong and powerful. Just look at how everything can be connected to build to what you're trying to say, how you can add clarity and then add more of yourself and more of Sour Lemons into this and I'll be absolutely golden.

Is there a way within this of these realisations you came to any of these realisations through Sour Lemons? What was your journey there and how can you incorporate Sour Lemons into this essay?

Is this your main point that you're arguing throughout?
